

World ports COVID-19 information portal

The operation of ports is of vital importance to face the coronavirus (COVID-19) crisis. Ports ensure that the world's medical supplies, food, energy raw materials, as well as manufactured goods and components vital to the preservation of employment, continue to reach their intended destinations.

In the spirit of international collaboration that drives the World Ports Sustainability Program, this dedicated webpage is designed to help ports worldwide face that challenge. Using the format of frequently-asked questions, we will provide guidance on current best practices, the industry's collective recommendations to governments as well as regularly updated, useful information.

<https://sustainableworldports.org/world-ports-covid19-information-portal/>